

The impact of the coronavirus pandemic is posing huge challenges for teachers, researchers and learners. At Cambridge University Press we are committed to supporting you at this difficult time. The Press plays a global role in education and research and shares its University's mission to contribute to society through its work. Sharing that research and making our content available can play an important role in tackling shared threats such as this. Please find below all of the resources and information on the Academic division's initiatives to respond to COVID-19.

1. Free access to Academic textbooks on Cambridge Core

- Cambridge University Press is making higher education textbooks free to access online through May 2020.
- All 700 textbooks, published and currently available in HTML format on Cambridge Core, are now available until the end of May, regardless of whether they were previously purchased.
- You can view the textbooks available here: <https://www.cambridge.org/core/what-we-publish/textbooks>.

2. Free access to book chapters and journal articles related to COVID-19

- The Press has made a collection of more than 80 relevant book chapters and journal articles freely available on Cambridge Core. The Press has also joined the Wellcome Trust and more than 30 leading publishers in committing to making all of our COVID-19 and coronavirus-related publications, and the available data supporting them, immediately accessible in PubMed Central (PMC) and other public repositories.
- Articles are drawn from journals including Epidemiology & Infection, Prehospital and Disaster Medicine, Infection Control & Hospital Epidemiology, and from Animal Health Research Reviews, among others. Future articles will be added to the collection once they have been published.
- View the full collection here: <https://www.cambridge.org/core/browse-subjects/medicine/coronavirus-free-access-collection>

3. Free access to key reference works on request

- For all customers of Cambridge Core experiencing disruption due to COVID-19, we're offering free access to Cambridge Histories, Cambridge Companions, and Cambridge Elements, through the end of May. Please get in touch with me, Paula Nicholson or our local partners in order to submit your request for access. This offer is limited to current paying customers only (institutions/countries with free access to our resources are not included).
