

Scopus Certification Program for Librarians

Format

The certification program consists of six online courses of approximately one hour each on the Canvas learning management system. The courses are anchored by short video tutorials, quizzes, and supplemented with exercises and support materials.

Courses: Topical Search, Author Identity, Metrics, APIs, Institutional Insights and User Outreach.

Prerequisite

Participants must be librarians or information managers at an institution or company with a Scopus subscription. If you are interested in taking Scopus Certification alongside a Scopus trial, please contact your Elsevier representative.

Application

Contact your Elsevier representative if you are interested in participating in an upcoming cohort.

Cohort

Each cohort consists of approximately 25 librarians. Training may be offered regionally or within a global cohort with participation from librarians around the world.

Certification

To become certified, participants must achieve 80% or more on each of the final course quizzes. Participants may retake the quiz if they do not achieve the necessary mark the first time and are provided with references to the necessary course materials to review. Participants who successfully complete the course can download a certificate of completion.
